The background of the cover is a detailed line drawing. On the right, two large, leafy trees frame a view of a building with a dome and spires, possibly a church or university building, situated on a hill. In the foreground, a person is sitting on a ledge, reading a book. The left side of the cover features a decorative border with intricate scrollwork and a vertical panel with a repeating geometric pattern.

Senior Class History

IN the fall of 1922 a rather happy and egotistical group of High-School graduates entered the Freshman Class of Bryson College and began trying to map out a schedule for the following year. For the first time in our young lives we began to realize how little we really knew.

Our Freshman Class consisted of thirty-five members, which up to that time was the largest class entering Bryson, having representatives from seven different States. We were proud of the fact that our class contributed to all phases of college activities and athletics.

We took as our motto, "The Elevator to Success is Not Running; Take the Stairs," and we have faithfully tried to carry it out.

With all the honors of the Freshman days over and a good summer's vacation, we reassembled September 12, 1923, as wise Sophomores. Our class had only lost a few of its members, and we had every reason to be proud of our class. Our class was still the largest one enrolled in Bryson, and we were rather busy helping the "poor little" Freshmen to get started off right.

In the fall of 1924, when our class assembled for the third time, we were right much grieved to learn that our class had greatly decreased, having only fifteen members left. However, with this small number we were far more serious than ever before.

September 10, 1925, found our number reduced to eight members; but, realizing our responsibility, we entered into our work with more ambition and more determination than we had shown before.

We realized fully that the prize which we sought was almost within our grasp, and knew we could not check in our efforts.

With our prize, the diploma, in our hands, we can only trust our future in the hands of a greater Power than ours.

Prophecy of the Class of 1926

LATE one rainy afternoon in the year of our Lord 1946, I stepped off the train in St. Louis to attend a druggists' convention, which was to be held there the following three days. I strolled up the street and paused at a news stand to purchase an evening paper. Coming down the middle of the street was a man carrying a huge sign, on which was painted: "Senator O. L. Hayes Will Give His Lecture on World Citizenship at Community Hall To-night." After reading the headlines of the paper, I knew the lecturer of the evening was my old classmate, "Stits."

Moving up the street a little farther, my attention was attracted by a flashing electric sign on a billboard. I read: "$5,000 Reward for the Capture of Raymond Randolph, Murderer of John Gilbert. (Signed) Howard O. Wiley, Chief of Police." The sign was opposite the police station; so I stopped to see our old friend, "Custard," who still was an advocate of keeping law and order. He invited me out to his home, which was a neatly arranged bungalow on one of the prominent streets.

After we had eaten supper, "Custard" tuned in on the radio to receive Dallas, Texas, and the voice of the announcer came to us distinctly: "It gives me great pleasure to announce that Dr. P. P. Dawson, of the Austin Theological Seminary, at Austin, Texas, will speak on 'The Ideal American.'" Then I heard the old, familiar voice of Dawson as plainly as if he were in the room with us.

After this remarkable address, the announcer again spoke: "Miss Bettye Moffatt will favor us with a piano solo, 'Paderewski's Minuet.' Miss Moffatt is a graduate of the American Conservatory of Music, and is now instructor of instrumental music in Southern Methodist University." Soon the instrument seemed to become alive with melodious strains which excited every emotion. At this point the music gradually faded away, and we were unable to get them again.

We removed the head phones and discussed our college days. He told me that "Buck" Lotts had gone into the ministry after receiving his B.D. at Princeton, and was making a great success. He had been pastor of the First Presbyterian Church in Staunton, Va., for a number of years, but resigned to take up evangelistic work. He still considers Fayetteville his home, and refuses to sell his beautiful brick bungalow on West College Street.

Having been called to New York City on business, one evening was spent at a vaudeville. A well-dressed couple, seated in front of me, attracted my attention, and I recognized the lady as my old classmate, Gladys Forrest. She introduced her husband as Professor Cravens, of Columbia University. She told me that she was president-elect of the W. C. T. U., and would assume her duties the following week. Isn't that just like Gladys?

Returning home, I was halted in Bowling Green, Ky., to have my newly purchased second-hand Ford worked on. Walking down the crowded street while the mechanic did the work, a sudden surprise came to me when I heard the familiar voice say: "Hey, Crook!" Looking around to see if I could find the owner, I saw Andy Boyd coming across the street with a traveling bag in one hand and a salesman's grip in the other. We went to a hotel for dinner, and there he told me of his experiences as a coach and later as a salesman for a large sporting goods concern in Kansas City.

The ringing of a bell broke in upon our conversation, and Gibson said: "Aren't you going to get up for breakfast?" Then I realized that this was all a dream. Each person in the class has his future in his own hands. It is for him to build the castles of which he dreams, or see them blasted. Our future is with us. What will we make it?

Junior Class History

WE have not upheld traditions; in fact, we have tried to change old traditions to ones more fitting. We have tried to establish new ones, for we have vanity enough to like to think we have done something lasting for Bryson.

We are more modern in spirit and thought than our predecessors. We have gained an insight into life, in that we are trying to live it and only use the textbooks as guides. We do not think that life depends upon a book, but that a book is merely to enrich life.

Having been the first class to find a well-organized curriculum, we have been able to get content better, thus getting a larger foundation for further development.

We are striving to work for what counts, and are learning how to estimate values. Having the vision of youth, we can do this, for far-sightedness gives us perspective. Youth and strength are ours. We do not yet count costs as anything.

Like youth everywhere, we are searching for something different. Just at the threshold, having the courage and conviction of youth and some wisdom and knowledge of real life, we are preparing to enter it to our fullest extent.

We are distinguished in some things, less distinguished in others; never below average in anything, but ourselves in everything.

In school activities we are among the first, if not the first. We have furnished debaters, musicians, scholars, athletes, presidents, and leaders of the different organizations. Our individualities and popularity were attested by the annual student election. We believe in our ideals and purposes; others believe in them.

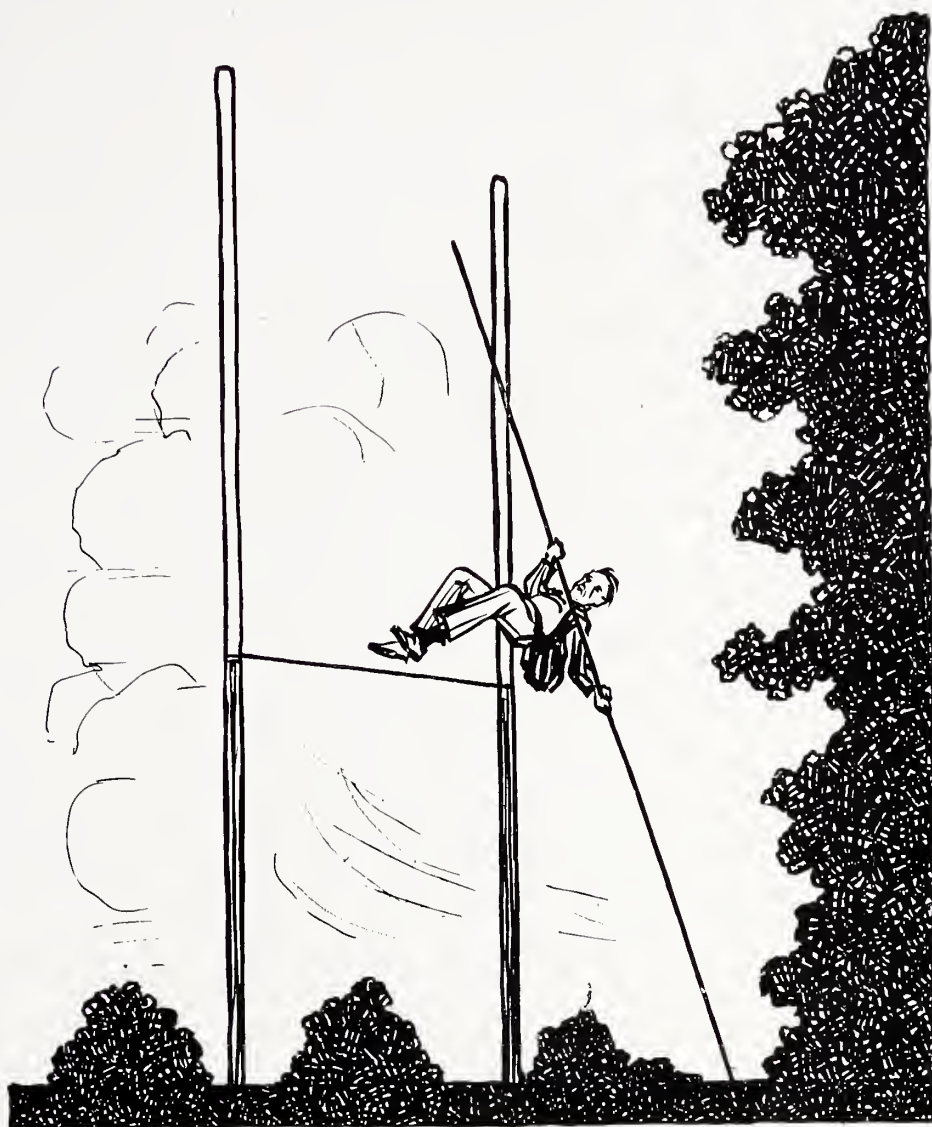

We are experimenting largely on what we have learned and what we are to learn. Like youth everywhere, we are gambling on the future.

We know that we do not know, but are sure that we may stumble upon that glorious opportunity, truth and life, if we do not work it out for ourselves.

We are hopelessly young—we know it—and we are! But here's to youth:

“Let not young souls be smothered out before
 They do quaint deeds and fully flaunt their pride.
 It is the world's one crime; its babes grow dull;
 Its poor are oxlike, limp, and leaden-eyed—
 Not that they strave, but starve so dreamlessly;
 Not that they sow, but that they seldom reap;
 Not that they serve, but have no gods to serve;
 Not that they die, but that they die like sheep.”

Sophomore Class History

AS a period of prosperity makes dull history, so a year of much nose-grinding and hard work makes a rather colorless class record. Writing a history of the Sophomore Class of '25-'26 is somewhat like editing a county paper in which the only news of interest is that Cy Wethers has painted his henhouse and that Aunt Jane Potter, who has been right poorly with rheumatism for several years, isn't any better.

As the Sophomore Class assembled at Bryson in September, 1925, some from the Freshman class of the preceding year failed to appear, but others came to swell the ranks. Although a year's seasoning was supposed to eradicate all our Freshman "greenness," there remained a few Sophomores who were still "sappy." At any rate, the Sophomores felt that it was their special duty, because of their superior knowledge and experience, to point out the straight and narrow way to the Freshmen. So, acting from the conviction that the best way to make a right impression on a young and growing mind is through the correct application of a belt to a well-known portion of the anatomy, the Sophomores proceeded to make life as hot as possible for the Freshmen.

The Sophomore Class took part in all the varied activities of the College. In football the class boasts of supplying six letter men. These include two stalwart guards, a tackle, a star end, and two fast, elusive halfbacks, who sniffed contemptuously at anything less than a fifteen-yard gain.

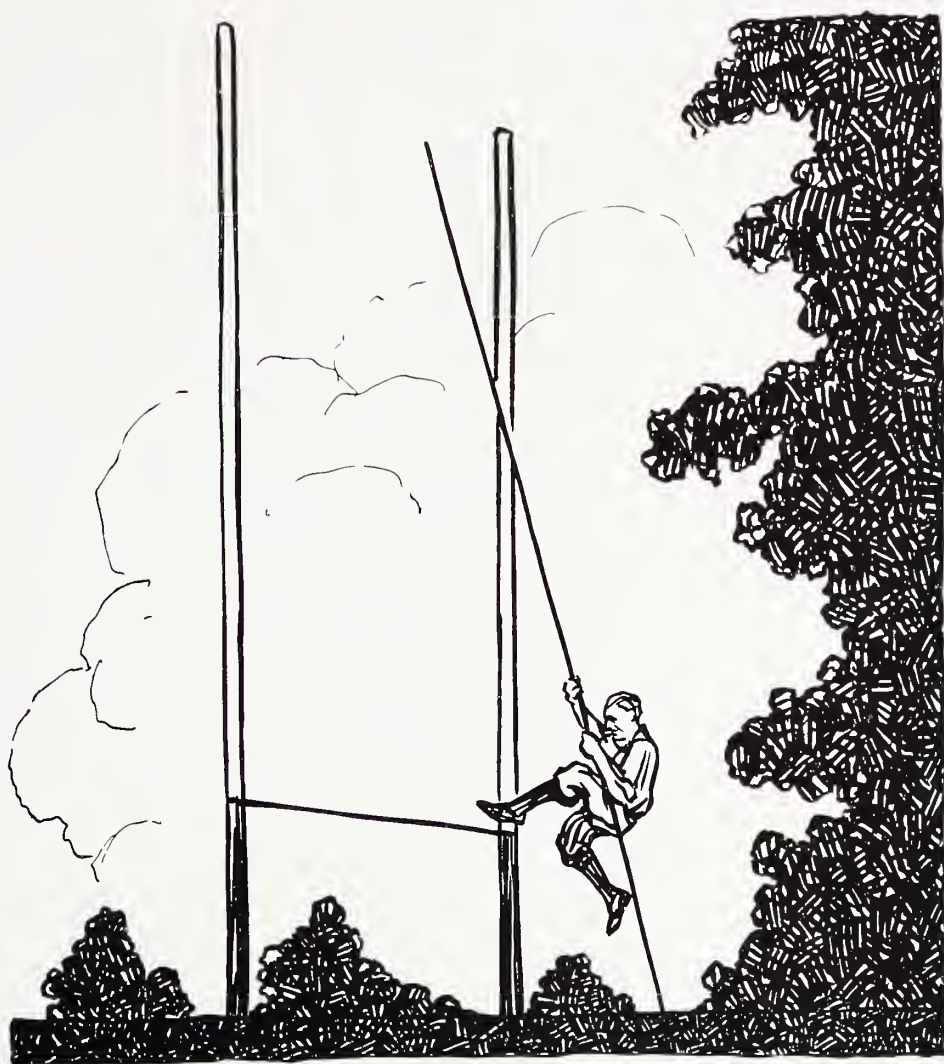

In baseball, besides supplying men for other positions, the class produced a pitcher, whose performance made Walter Johnson sigh and wish he were young again.

The Sophomores were also represented in other lines of athletics, such as basket ball, tennis, and jazz. Incidentally, the one chosen for the honor of being the jazziest jazzhound in the College is of our number.

Some of the class have even gone so far as to commit the folly of studying a little now and then. Despite the determined declarations of professors, who, biting their lips and clenching their fists, like the immortal heroes of the Marne, declared, "They shall not pass!" the Sophomores, using their pens as bayonets, have broken through to good marks on the record books.

The story of all the illustrious achievements of the Sophomore Class would fill many pages. It is hoped that they will all return for their third year at Bryson and continue the work they are now doing.

Freshman Class History

IT was in September of 1925 after a long, hot summer. Because of the extreme dry weather, weeds were few, fields of corn had turned brown, and even the grass and trees had lost some of their color. But the campus of Bryson College presented a striking contrast; for it was adorned with green, living things, all piled together in a confused mass. The whole hill had a greenish cast. Yet this was no fantastic revival which Nature had begun in the autumn. It was caused by the arrival of the Bryson Freshmen, who were just beginning to display their "greenness."

We soon found that we were the largest, peppiest class in College, with more names on our roll book than any class that Bryson had ever had before. As we were becoming somewhat "stuck up," the "old men" thought it best to drive out some of this conceit. This was fully accomplished with the aid of heavy belts and tormenting caps for the boys, and twenty small bows of green ribbon for the locks of the "Fresh Flowers." It was only a short time until we had found that obedience was the keynote to success in gaining the mercy of the "old men."

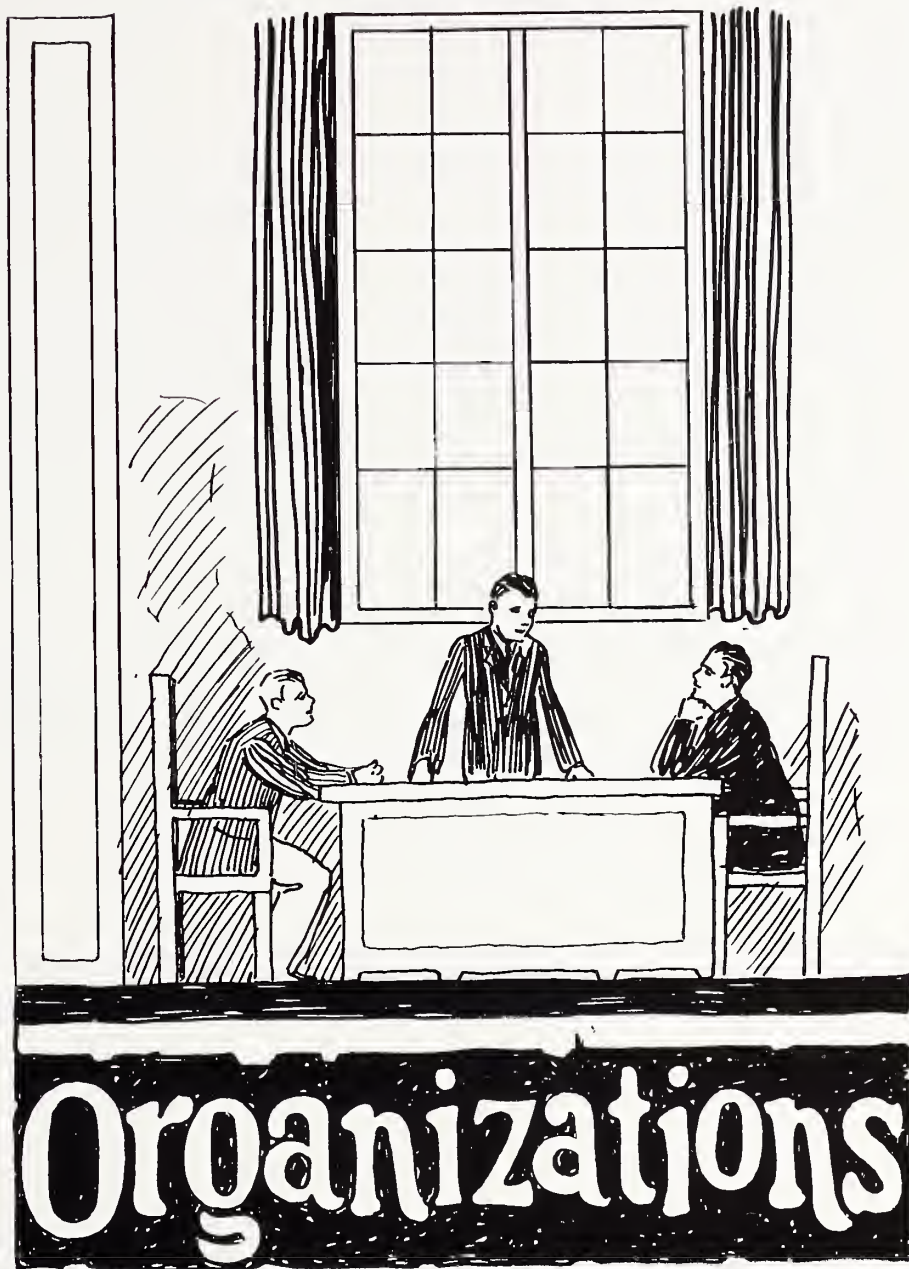

Our influence soon began to be felt in volunteer student activities, in the classroom, and on the athletic field. It was the courtesy of the Freshmen that caused the visiting football teams to say that Bryson manifested the best school spirit of any school they had ever played. We would do almost anything to attract attention, and even study a little sometimes—when we had nothing else to do.

No one class ever gave more to Bryson's Football Team than did the Freshman Class of 1925. Besides providing four letter men, there were always plenty of Freshmen athletes ready to fill any vacancy. This was also true in baseball, in which the Freshmen took a loyal interest.

These are just a few of the reasons why we think the Freshman Class is the best and by far the freshest class in Bryson. We are boosters for a Bigger, Better Bryson, and supply a large part of the "pep" and spirit for which it is noted.

We are now looking forward to the year 1926-27, hoping that Bryson will have a Sophomore Class with a much broader idea of college life than ever before; and three years from now we expect Bryson to send forth a Senior Class of which she will always be proud.

Varsity Football Review

THE football season of 1925 is now history; but, unlike ancient history, it has not been forgotten. On September 1, Coach McDaniel issued the call for the football men to assemble in the camp. To this call many responded, and went to work in earnest for a place on the team. Among the letter men of '24 were found Captain Gibson, Myhand, Jobe, Goodrich, Gray, McAdams, Taylor, Boyd, Hays, and Wilbur McCown; and of the Reserves of '24, Cunningham and Elliott. With these men as a nucleus and the addition of new men from the various schools of Arkansas and Tennessee, Coach McDaniel was able to turn out a team of which any school should be proud.

With able coaching and hard work on the part of all, the Tigers bore the Blue and White banner of Bryson College through the most successful season in the history of the College, winning six out of nine games played against some of the strongest colleges in the South.

BRYSON, 0; SEWANEE, 14

In the opening game Bryson tangled with the strong University of the South at Sewanee on September 16. With five regulars on the sideline with injuries, Bryson gave the strong Sewanee Tigers more than they expected and wanted. Only in the second and third quarters were the Sewanee Tigers able to cross our goal for their two counters. Although considerably outweighed, only at times were they able to gain over Bryson's line, and passes and end runs were always blocked. The game was defensive, and Lindsay made several tackles behind the line. McDill's punting of 60 yards was the feature of the game, while Rye, Boyd, Hays, and Cunningham made good gains.

19 · THE BRIDGE · 26

BRYSON, 21; BETHEL (KY.), 0

On October 2 the Brysonites invaded the camp of the Bethelites at Russellville, Ky., and were successful in bringing home the pigskin. Bethel had a strong team, but Boyd, Taylor, and Hays could not be stopped. McDill's run in the third quarter was one of the features of the game. McAdams, at right guard, played a good game.

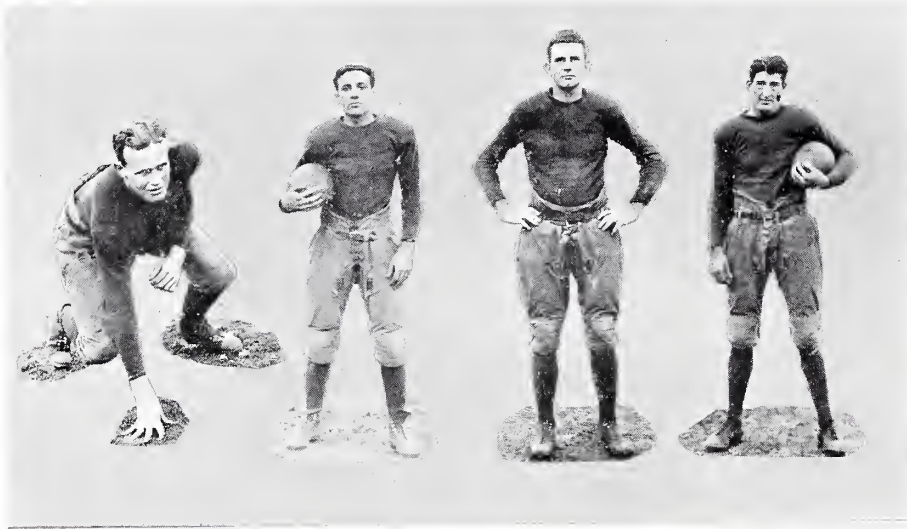

BRYSON, 6; M. T. S. T. C., 13

The third game of the season was played with Middle Tennessee State Teachers' College, at Murfreesboro, on October 9. A sudden change in climatic conditions seemed to add to their handicap on their off day (as it seemed to be). The line played good ball throughout the game, but the backfield seemed a little slow on getting off. McDill's punting was good, but was a little below his standard. Cunningham and Rye made two or three nice gains, while the others played rather consistent ball.

BRYSON, 7; BETHEL (TENN.), 0

On October 16 the Bethelites, of McKenzie, Tenn., were the victims of the Tigers. Both teams were evenly matched, and on a wet field the Brysonites overcame their opponents with a 7-to-0 victory in the hotly contested game. Jobe, Gray, and McAdams played the best line game, while Captain Gibson covered every punt and held down the right wing. Rye and Hays were the best ground gainers.

19 · THE BRIDGE · 26

BRYSON, 20; CUMBERLAND UNIVERSITY, 19

This game, on October 23, was easily the feature game of the season, and is generally accorded to be the most spectacular game ever witnessed on the local field. Cumberland's 13-point lead at the end of the initial half was overcome by the most wonderful football fieldship and most splendid fighting spirit displayed throughout the current season. Taylor, pilot of the crew, featured the third quarter with a 70-yard sweeping run through the left flank of the Cumberland crowd, placing the ball on the 15-yard line. A series of line plays by Boyd and Rye netted our first marker. Score: 13 to 7. In the opening of the final quarter a 25-yard pass from McDill to Hays, followed by the terrific line onslaughts of Hays, terminated when Taylor crashed through center for the second touchdown. Score: 13 to 13. Cumberland's renewed drive was abruptly ended when Rye intercepted a pass from Singleton and staged a sensational sprint of sixty yards through the entire team for Bryson's final touchdown. Taylor drop-kicked the extra point. The Knee and Singleton combination, working on line breaks and passes, forced Cumberland over in the last minute of play. Score: 20 to 19. Captain Gibson blocked the point after the touchdown and bore a blackened eye as a scar of victory.

BRYSON, 57; ALABAMA STATE NORMAL, 0

On November 13 "revenge" was the motto, and we got it. Last fall the Alabama Normal team beat Bryson, and every member of the team fought hard to get revenge. The Tigers gained at will, Cunningham getting loose for some nice gains, while Harry McCown, Hays, and Boyd also gained much ground. The line did stellar work in blocking the plays attempted over them.

BRYSON, 13; LITTLE ROCK COLLEGE, 20

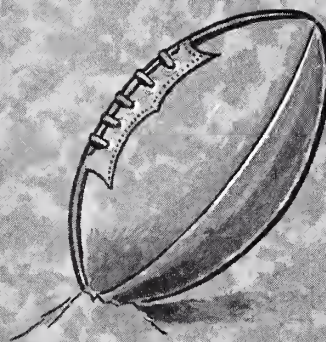

It was November 20 that Bryson made her football début in the sister State of Arkansas. Outweighed twenty pounds to the man, the "never-die" fighting spirit of the Tigers enabled them to hold the strong Little Rock College team to a one-touchdown lead. Not until the Tigers' reserve strength was exhausted in the fourth quarter were the Arkansans able to put over the final touchdown for the victory. The game was a hard-fought one throughout, and every fellow did his part. McAdams and Jobe played good ball in the line, while Gibson and Myhand stopped everything coming their way. The entire backfield did good work, but the accurate passing of Taylor to Gibson was the feature of the game.

BRYSON, 41; HUNTSVILLE COLLEGE, 0

On Thanksgiving Day, Huntsville College brought a hard-fighting team to Fayetteville to play Bryson. The visitors fought hard from the start, but the Tigers were too much for them, both in skill and accuracy. One of the features of the game was the pass of 23 yards by Taylor to Myhand, who ran the remaining 20 yards for a touchdown after evading several tacklers. Captain Gibson and Jobe also played good ball, while Boyd, Hays, Rye, Cunningham, H. McCown, and McDill gained at will, both by end runs and through the line.

Baseball Summary for Season of '25

THE baseball season of 1925 is a memory that will live in the minds of Bryson students. Practice opened March 1, and in a few weeks Coach McDaniel was able to turn out a winning team. With Wilbur McCown behind the bat and Myhand, Britt, and Gray to do the twirling, seven out of thirteen games were won by Bryson. Lesley was again found on the keystone and McAdams on the third sacker. Boyd was again found in right field. The other positions were filled with new men—Gibson, at first base; McAden, at shortstop; Oates and Hays, in the outfield.

Myhand went good this season, winning five out of six games and hitting consistently.

The outcome of the season of 1926 remains a prophecy. Five letter men are back, and, with the new material, we are expecting a winning team.

BASKET-BALL NOTE

No intercollegiate games were played in basket ball because of the new Southern College Association athletic ruling. Intra-mural games were played, in which the Freshman Team was champion.

KNUTSTUFF

Knutstuff

Gentle reader, we can assure you that these are live jokes. We tested some of them in the fire, and it just roared.

Editing jokes is the most serious business in the world.

"I've told [toll]ed] this one before," said the old sexton as he began to pull the bell cord.

Ye jokester says: "It's only natural that one's brightest ideas should come in a flash."

Some students think that it is not necessary for them to support THE BRIDGE, because it has a staff to lean on.

Gladys (in Annual office) : "It's awfully warm in here."
"Bud" (businesslike, as usual) : "See the Circulation Manager."

If Miss Pressly hides her money in the bass horn, is it sound banking?

Anna Lee: "Aw, a fellow who's in love is simply intoxicated."
Louis S.: "Yeh; but when he gets married, he usually sobers up."

"It's all over now," said Mary Alma as she dabbed the full and final contents of the powder puff on her face.

19 · THE BRIDGE · 26

Mr. Sloan: "D' you understand what is meant by this Chemistry deposit fee?"

Wilbur Mc. (brilliant in Economics, but bad breaks in Chemistry):
"Yes, sir; it's the law of diminishing returns."

ALL KEYED UP

Ye jokester confesses that his typewriter is a machine he "loves to touch."

Martha to Maurice: "Your tie is too loud, Maurice."
The latter: "H'well, I'll put on my muffler then."

FOOLISH FILOSIFIKATION

Marriage may not be a man-made institution,
But it's governed by a man-maid constitution.

"Yank" (self-apologetically): "Bow legs are a sign of courage."
Mary (Miss understandingly): "'Specially if the owner wears an up-to-date skirt."

"Let's turn over a new leaf," said Adam to Eve.

Britt: "A good chef gets more than a college professor."
McAdams (sniffingly and sneeringly): "Why shouldn't he? More take his courses."

Mr. Sloan (snappily): "Why didn't you filter this?"
Mr. Dawson (simultaneously): "'Fraid it wouldn't stand the strain."
